A JEWISH MARTYR TO SCIENCE

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

From Washington comes the sad report of the premature death of Dr. Joseph Goldberger, a United States Public Health Scientist. Dr. Goldberger was stricken while engaged in a study of the diets thought to cause the disease of pellagra. It is believed that during his researches, Dr. Goldberger contracted this unknown infection, which baffled the doctors, and which ultimately caused his death.

Before this fatal attack, Dr. Goldberger had in his service to humanity suffered from other fatal illness—typhus fever, contracted fifteen years ago, while experimenting on it in Mexico City; yellow fever, shortly after working with this disease in New Orleans, and dengue fever while studying it in Texas.

Dr. Goldberger made some important discoveries with reference to diseases from diets and his work has added much to the knowledge of nutrition. Through his efforts, pellagra has been eliminated as one of the dread diseases.

He is a martyr to science and humanity. His conquest of a disease is more important than the conquest of many an army. He risked his life not mid the romance of blaring trumpets, applauding ladies and commendatory headlines. He faced death quietly and bravely.

Besides a few comments in scientific circles his death may go unnoticed. But what a fine hero to hold up as an example to children. Dr. Goldberger's death again has demonstrated that courage and heroism are not martial virtues, but can be displayed in the useful arts of peace, salvaging life as well as on the field of battle destroying it. The obituary notices indicated that Dr. Goldberger was born in Austria. To-day the quota law would bar him from the United States, and the East-European phobia from Canada.

THE INFLUENCE OF REFORM UPON ORTHODOXY

Despite the verbal lambastings that Reform Judaism receives from time to time from orthodox and conservative pulpiteers, the influence of reform on orthodoxy is clearly apparent. Nor is that unusual. Reform did not spring from air; nor was it imposed by wilful men. It was the inevitable product of emancipation, and the logical result of the mingling of Judaism with modern thought. The change in ritual and ceremonial which is all that reform seems to be to the many is but incidental and accidental in the reform philosophy. As has been iterated and reiterated in this column, the difference reform and orthodoxy with reference to ceremonies is not a quantitative one. The difference is rather with reference to authority. The orthodox believer performs ceremonies because God instituted them. The liberal performs them because they seem helpful and inspiring. The liberal, therefore, will not hesitate to eliminate old ceremonies, and to create new ones.

The broadsides against reform Judaism which have come from orthodox and conservative circles have been focussed on the ritual changes. Strange to say these broadsides are continued and very frequently from conservative rabbis. Yet the facts are that the same changes in ritual which accompanies reform is accompanying conservatism.

The late Friday evening services were instituted by reform congregations. They were vehemently attacked by orthodox leaders. They are

LEADERSHIP WITHOUT FOLLOWING

One of the most peculiar features of American Jewish life is that we have many leaders and very few followers.

There are organizations. Each is supposed to stand for some ideal, to promote some purpose. There are officers. They are conscious of responsibilities which appertain to their offices. They devise plans for the maintenance of their institutions. They figure out the financial requirements and launch schemes for raising the needed funds. Do the organizations and the leaders and the responsibilities and the plans reach the public, disturb the masses?

Let us be more specific:

Look at the Federations of Philanthropies in the various cities. They embody the humane impulse which is to be found in the majority of mankind. They represent the notion that Jews are obliged to take care of their own poor. They further represent the most advanced ideas of scientific and efficient ameliorative service. Where do these organizations obtain their support? The answer is well known. Campaigns are held periodically, and subscriptions are obtained from a handful of people. A few individuals take the initiative. They worry a small circle who move within their social or financial periphery into giving more or less substantial amounts. The public at large is unmoved. The virus which upsets the equanimity of the minority does not disturb the crowds. The ideas or ideals, or call them what you will, which are associated with the philanthropic endeavors do not enter into and influence the life of the mob.

Consider the other institutions in which our communities abound. A similar situation obtains with regard to them. Let the institution be an orphanage asylum, a Y.M.H.A., a hospital, a Talmud Torah. The heads of the organizations seem to be uncommonly solicitous of the welfare of their institutions. They will spend their time, and money to keep the organizations alive. But the public outside the radius of the influence are apathetic. Each institution, even in the big communities seldom have more than a few hundred members. We daresay that none of these institutions in Toronto has as many as a thousand members each. We have fifty thousand Jews here. One thousand are susceptible to the idea, of let us say a Talmud Torah, or an orphanage asylum. Of these perhaps no more than twenty-five are actively concerned with the business of the institutions. Forty nine thousand Jews are totally oblivious of the existence of the organizations; are indifferent to them; are not influenced by them.

Examine the more universally appealing institution of religion. There are a multitude of synagogues. Yet we believe we are safe in saying that in a city like Toronto, the membership enrollment does not exceed twenty-five hundred. Jews are Jews. They are members of the Jewish faith. Out of fifty thousand Jews not more than five per cent are affiliated with the religious establishments. What coloring does the life of the majority get from the religion of which the Jewish people are the guardians?

Zionism is a movement which impales the profoundest interpretation of the significance of Jewish life in all its phases. Its doctrines are substantially acceptable to the vast majority of Jewdom. Only a small percentage take the trouble of evolving universal philosophies whose implications might conflict with the tenets of Zionism in their own sphere.

COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi HARRY J. STERN, of Montreal,
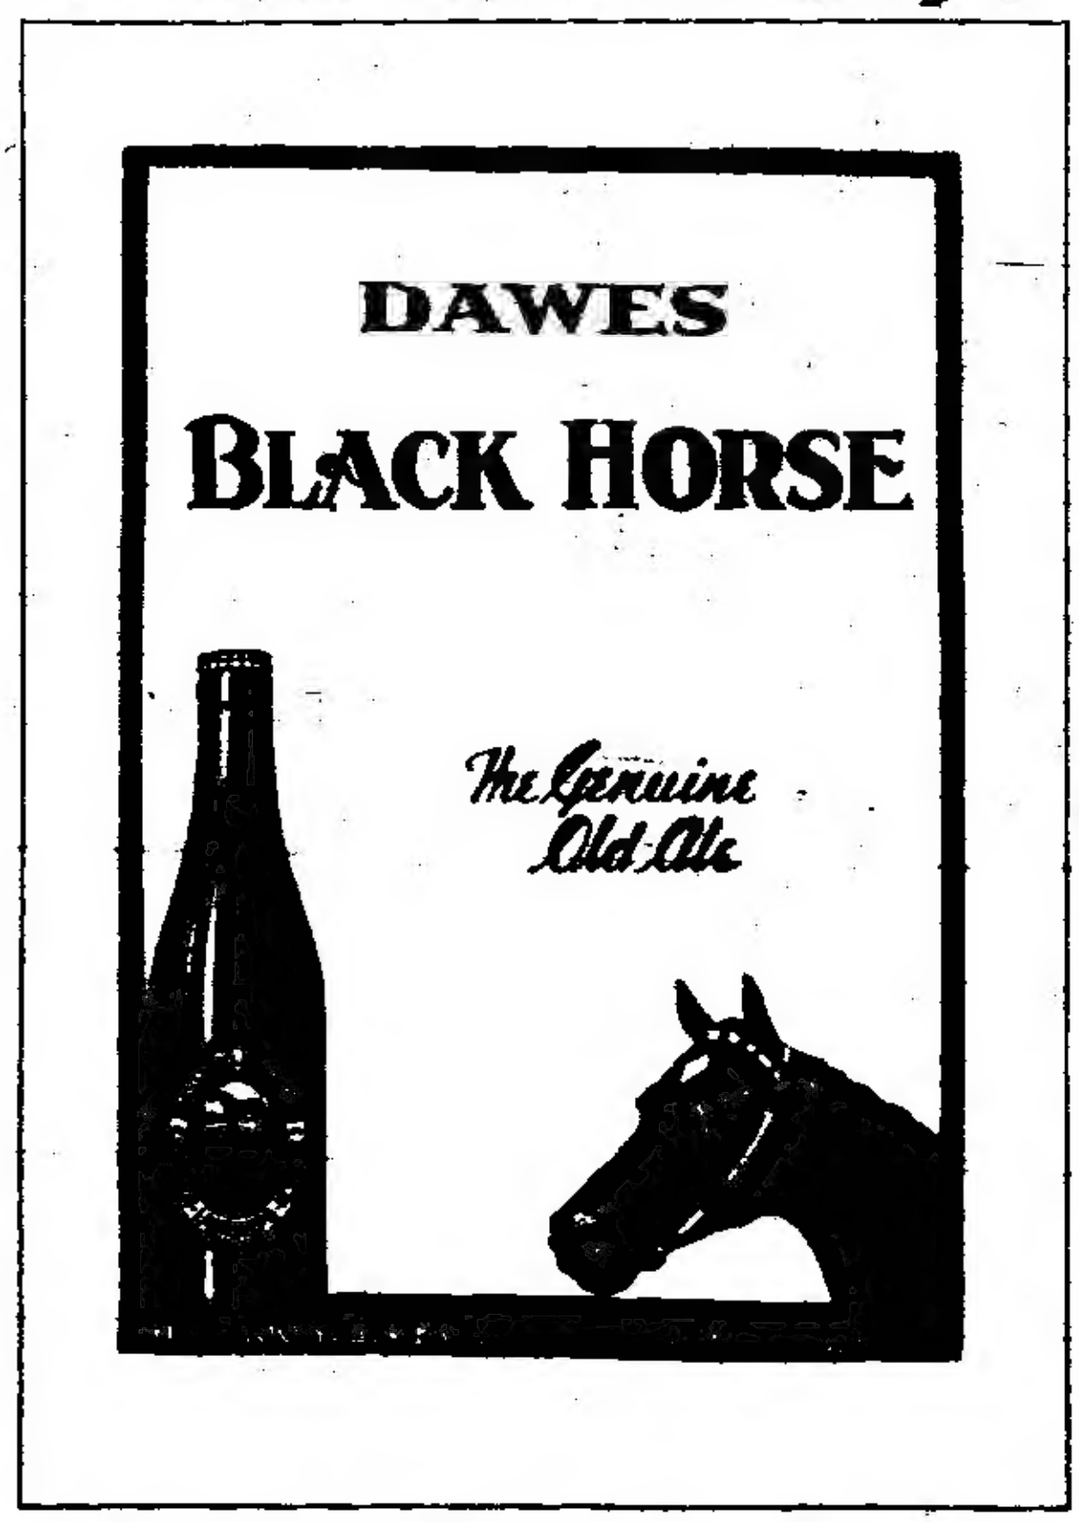
Associate Contributing Editor

JEWISH FELLOWSHIP

I firmly believe in helping to bring about fellowship between Jew and non-Jew. But as I go from one meeting to another speaking on "Goodwill" the thought haunts me—what about Jewish fellowship? Yes, even within our own household, Israel, there is much to be done to establish better understanding and to bring about goodwill. Paradoxical as it may seem—we Jews who have cried out against anti-semitism, are often guilty of Jewish anti-semitism. We come to conclusions about each other without knowing anything about one another. The orthodox Jew will speak unkindly of the Reform Jew—he will label him a "goy" without ever having visited the Temple, without having made a study of the why and wherefore of Reform. The Liberal Jew, on the other hand, is often guilty of ignorance about orthodoxy. Both Liberal and Orthodox Judaism are expressions of the Jewish spirit. And what I plead for is a fair hearing for both—sincerity and respect for each other. Orthodoxy and Reform have one goal—"Yiddishkeit." To preserve and develop Judaism let us all labour in the manner we best deem fit. The tasks in Jewish life that are ahead of us are so great—they call for the energies of a united Israel. We can all of us unite in helping the cause of Jewish education—in heightening Jewish culture—in presenting a united front when it comes to the demands of Jewish rights. Let us not boast that we are united in giving alms to our needy. Jewish unity must rest on loftier foundations than merely of bringing relief to the less fortunate of our brethren. Jewish idealism, Jewish thought, Jewish History, Jewish hopes, these are sacred bonds uniting us. And Judaism and Israel are greater than any individual Jew or any congregation. Let not the petty, insignificant things divide us. We are one. The outside world judges us as a unit. We are held responsible for the action of every one of our brethren. Let us not shut ourselves away one from another. "Behold how beautiful and pleasant it is when brethren dwell together in unity."



RABBI ZLOTNIK WRITES ON KOHELETH

I am happy to add to my library the splendid study on Ecclesiastes by Rabbi Zlotnik. One does wonder where Zlotnik, amidst the busy labours in the cause of Canadian Zionism, finds the time to climb in the realm of scholarship. I like his book and rejoice to see that a graduate of "Volozin" Yeshiba has the courage to enter in the "Pardes" of recent studies in biblical criticism and interpret these to the Yiddish reading public. I trust literary Jewish Montreal will not hesitate to obtain this volume for their libraries. Congratulations Rabbi Zlotnik!

"THE HAT"

Once more a "doubter" wants to know why orthodox Jews lay so much stress on wearing the "hat" during worship. I suggest that this doubter read the splendid article on "Bareheadedness" by my late sainted teacher, Professor Deutsch, found in the Jewish Encyclopedia II pp. 530 ff. From the point of view of Jewish law I find no objection to either covering or uncovering the head during prayer. The whole matter is merely based on social propriety and custom. There is no law in the Bible or Talmud prescribing the covering of the head for men when participating in a religious service. The wearing of the hat is merely a custom which Jews borrowed from their oriental neighbours. It ought not to divide Jews. It is a mere detail in the face of the greater issues, in present-day Israel.

"A PRAYER"

DEAR LORD, keep me from the littleness and meanness of ingratitude. Give me a heart full of thanksgiving and praise to Thee and overflowing with love for my fellow man and appreciation of his efforts and struggles.

May I never bear tales of evil or weakness of other people. If I watch my own mistakes I shall be in a far better business. I can better aid others by calling attention to their strong points. May I help to build another's reputation rather than to seek by word or act to tear it down.

Keep me this day free from the evil of selfishness. Of all sin, selfishness is the most heinous and diabolical. Selfishness carried to the extreme will make a person capable of the blackest crime. May I seek to lose selfishness in an all-inspiring and all-pervading altruism. May my thoughts be for others, not self.

May we never be tempted to turn back nor even hesitate and falter because the road before us seems to be steep. The uphill road is the road to God and if we keep on climbing we shall finally reach the crest and with it rest and peace.

It is my daily prayer that I may be a good loser and good winner in the moral affairs of life. May I not be cast down when all goes wrong and my soul is troubled, and may I not be elated unduly when success comes and all is well. May I keep my poise and self-possession through it all.

HEAVENLY FATHER, give me persistence to finish the task I begin. May my zeal be quickened and courage renewed. May I continue to perform faithfully my work until the task is done.

Every Friday

Lately when the Southwestern branch of the Jewish Chatauqua Society held its annual meeting at Houston, Texas, a Sunday school teacher of that city, Miss Tillie Pomerantz, read a paper on religious schools in which she said that "the ultimate goal of the religious school is to look after moral education." In answer to this Rabbi Walter G. Peiser, of Beaumont, said: "Character and morality is learned in everyday life." Three hours a week of Sunday School is only about one-fortieth of the child's life. He learns more about character in the public schools and in the home. It is up to the parents to teach character and morality, and parents are all too willing to shift the burden to the public schools and the Sunday School. The aim of the religious school is to teach Jewishness. We teach Jewish history not to inculcate morality but Jewish history. The same is true of Hebrew."

Spoken like a man! If the Sunday school does anything toward the moral education of the child it must be by-the-by. Parents send their children to Sunday school so that the youngsters "will know they are Jews" or because they feel it is the thing to do or (sh!) perhaps even for social reasons but surely not to give them enough moral training to last them a whole week. The time in Sunday school is short and, as any one knows who has ever taught there or visited there, much of it goes to keeping order. The parents do not take the entire institution too seriously and neither do the children. And anyway most children in the world receive whatever moral education they have without benefit of religion.

If the moral tone of the home is high, moral teaching elsewhere acquired is good but additional or perhaps superfluous. If the moral tone of the home is low, moral teaching elsewhere acquired can be undone in no time. Some people believe that it is necessary to wrap up ethical teaching with religion when presenting it to children. Many families demonstrate that this is not necessary. A home may call itself "very religious" and a child who hears in public school and Sunday school the beauty of always telling the truth may be sent to the door by his mother to say "my mother is not home," or he may hear enough of business gossip to form his own conclusions about standards of conduct, high or low. Parents who do expect Sunday school to work miracles are unequal to the strict discipline that child-rearing places upon them. For children are best taught moral values not by hearing them expounded or illustrated but by seeing them employed in hour-to-hour-living.

On this subject of Sunday-school and moral education Dr. S. Felix Mendelsohn, rabbi and editorial writer of the Chicago Sentinel says:

"It is only high-faluting phraseology to say that we are teaching morality in our Sunday School. If this were our aim then we are attempting the impossible. What we are really trying to do is to give our children a smattering of Jewishness—but even this we cannot do very successfully not only because of the brevity of the time alloted to the Sunday School, but also because of the erroneous attitude of our teachers towards their work. The religious spirit and the Jewishness of our Sunday School teachers is only a conventional lie. Most of them are not enthusiastic about the subject they are teaching and they do not even deem it necessary to attend services in that synagogue in behalf of which they are supposedly preaching loyalty. Such slipshod instructors cannot possibly have a definite influence upon the rising generation."

In some of the larger American cities a Jewish Sunday school teacher must [illegible] a public school teacher and is paid. In many other communities in the country Sunday school teachers need be nothing more than willing to get up on Sunday morning, read the lesson hurriedly on the way and [illegible] have been willing to do this for years [illegible] have been referred to by the pupils as "kids." Once a young man [illegible] a Sunday school class, protested saying to the rabbi: "But you know I am an atheist." The rabbi answered: "That makes no difference. You are a good teacher." (Verification on request). But Dr. Mendelsohn wants the Sunday school teacher to possess religious enthusiasm about the subject and a devotion to synagogue attendance and undoubtedly good looks besides since this attribute does make a difference. Such a bargain should be uncommon and the [illegible] should [illegible] to secure [illegible] of the Sunday school [illegible] than the teaching of a smattering of Jewishness.

New Pontiac Big Six

Drawing on the vast resources of General Motors, cashing in on the matchless facilities of General Motors Research Division and Proving Ground, capitalizing on the most spectacular sales success in automobile annals, Pontiac engineers have produced the New Pontiac Big Six a car so big in luxury—in performance—that no other name adequately describes it.

It has a bigger engine than last year's Pontiac—200 cubic inches piston displacement. The Big Six has a counterweighted crankshaft and the Harmonic Balancer. You will be delighted with its smoothness and silence.

It has the very newest type of self energizing internal expanding mechanical four-wheel brakes not affected by mud, water or changes in temperature. A new parking brake on rear of the transmission.

The Big Six has a beautiful line of new and original Fisher Bodies—big, roomy, comfortable bodies with adjustable driver's seats—with lines so individual as to attract attention anywhere.

The transmission has been improved resulting in quieter operation and longer life. The rear axle has been improved it's stronger and better. Hitchkiss drive with tubular drive shaft and two universal joints is now substituted for the torque tube drive.

Front and rear springs are two inches wide, with thin flexible leaves. Leather spring covers and Lovejoy shock absorbers these give the Pontiac Big Six rear big car riding comfort.

In fact there is not a detail of the New Pontiac Big Six which does not justify its name. It is a car that you can sell effectively against many cars considerably higher in price—a car so thoroughly engineered—a car of such obvious big car construction that it actually removes all comparison with other cars in its price class.

untraditional. The traditional service is a brief service at sunset. Yet what has happened? Most conservative synagogues have adopted the late Friday evening service. The worshipping of men and women together was established by reform synagogues. Again orthodox fusillades poured on the reform leaders for this innovation. To-day in almost all the conservative synagogues men and women sit together at services. When the organ was added to the temple service, another furor arose. And again, some conservative synagogues imitated the reform and their services have been beautified by the music of the organ. When confirmation services for girls were introduced on Shabuoth, again many and noisy were the protests. To-day conservative synagogues have instituted similar services.

Last year when Holy Blossom instituted a Sunday morning service retaining the traditional Sabbath Eve and Sabbath morning services, there boomed again the cannons of criticism from orthodox and conservative alike. But even in this respect conservative synagogues are beginning to follow the reform. Two weeks ago, the B'nai Jeshurun Synagogue of New York City, whose rabbi is a graduate of the Theological Seminary, and which is a proponent of conservative Judaism, announced that it had decided to abandon its late Friday evening service and to add a Sunday morning Forum Service. Thus we see that conservative synagogues are committing most of the so-called sins of the reform—which merely means that the reform synagogue has had the courage to be the pioneer and to experiment, gladly shouldering the inevitable criticism and difficulties—and conservative synagogues have had the wisdom to imitate the successful experiments of the reform. Let the rabbis continue their attacks from the pulpits. Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery and conservative Judaism is vindicating reform.

Sun Life Policyholders To Receive Special Bonus

In addition to regular dividends in 1929 of approximately $17,500,000

Office of the President,
MONTREAL, January 8, 1929

To Our Policyholders:

We have just completed another wonderful year, with profit earnings never before equalled. Our Directors have therefore inaugurated the principle of allowing a Special Bonus on maturing participating policies. The basis for 1929 may be summarized as follows:

> On policies ten years in force, maturing by death or (on 'reserve dividend' policies) by the expiry of the reserve dividend period, a bonus of 10 per cent of the reserve, increasing yearly to 15 per cent on policies in force twenty years or longer; on endowments, at maturity, a bonus of 10 per cent of the face value of policies ten years in force, increasing yearly to 15 per cent on policies in force twenty years or longer.

Details will be given in the forthcoming annual report.

This special bonus is in addition to, and independent of, the usual annual profit distribution, the scale for which, for the ninth consecutive year, will again be increased.

We congratulate our members on this happy announcement. It has been made possible only by the large profits earned on the securities selected for the investment of the Company's funds.

As ninety-five per cent of all surplus earned by the participating assurances accrues to our policyholders themselves, they enjoy practical mutuality, combined with the enterprise and stability of stock management. The effect of this combination is evidenced by the results.

T. B. Macaulay,
President.

SAYS MINERAL DEVELOPMENT OF B. C. JUST STARTING

Recently A high official of The Canadian Pacific Railway made the following statement:

"Notwithstanding the great mining progress which has been made in the past, I am one of those who believe that the mineral development of British Columbia is only at the beginning."

The Vancouver Island, the Crest Copper Syndicate area has been a consistent feature. It seems to be definitely established, despite the silence of Directors on the subject, that Crest Copper is proving to be an extensive property, and the unofficial reports that come out, if correct, point to this becoming one of the great copper producing areas of the world. What makes this optimism, is the fact that there was considerable trading in Crest Copper over a period of 18 months but during the past six months there have been few days on which there has been a single transaction on Toronto Stock Exchange. It would therefore appear that insiders have taken up all the stock offered and are holding it.

Interpenetrating on the Quatsino Copper-Gold Mines Limited property and Quatsino Copper-Gold Mines Limited are being actively carried on at the present time. A tunnel is being driven to intersect the 700 foot vein at which point it is expected this will be completed within the next five weeks when the Company's engineer will make an examination and decide on a plan for further development. Quatsino Copper-Gold Mines recently acquired the power rights on the Bay River adjoining their property and staked several additional claims to provide a site for a power house. Engineers state that it will be possible to develop 1,000 H.P. which will be sufficient for the needs of the Company for some time to come.

The additional claims staked for a power house site above good mineral values and bring the holdings of the Company up to a full 80 claims. With the development of the work and the British Columbia Power Company is applying to the Government for permission to develop the Campbell River power at the northern end of Vancouver Island. The plans that have outlined Saunders officials have been considering with British Columbia Power Company officials for the past few days would seem to indicate that the site for the proposed power house has been selected there. This also indicates that cheaper facilities to Crest Copper-Quatsino properties will shortly be provided and confirms the opinion that Consolidated consider Crest Copper justifies the immediate erection of a smelter. In this connection it is pointed out that Quatsino Copper-Gold Mines are assured of transportation and smelting facilities for their ores which are shortly to commence from Crest Copper through the Quatsino property.

It Came to Pass That——

This CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW feature must prove of absorbing interest to all its readers, especially the young folks. It is a history of the Jewish people through centuries recorded by days. Buy a loose-leaf note book, clip this account and paste it in. If you do this every week, in time you will possess a hand-book of value. The historian is Dr. Cecil Roth, of London, England, fellow of the Royal Historical Society, author and essayist.

JANUARY 26TH

Capitulation of Pernambuco, 1654.—This port (otherwise known as Recife) was one of the most important cities of seventeenth-century Brazil, and headquarters of the Dutch administration after the conquest of a large part of the country from the hands of the Portuguese. Like all the Spanish and Portuguese dependencies, it was swarming with Marranos, who quickly threw off the disguise of Christianity immediately they came under a more tolerant rule. In consequence, the portion of Brazil under Dutch rule became the seat of a number of congregations of professing Jews, looking to Amsterdam for their spiritual guidance. The most important of these known as the K. K. Zur Israel ('Rock of Israel') was situated at Pernambuco, whither Isaac Aboab de Fonseca 'the first American Rabbi' was summoned as haham. The Portuguese, however, did not acquiesce lightly in the loss of their possessions, and a prolonged struggle for the mastery of the country ensued. The Jews, knowing that through their action they had incurred the utmost penalties of the Inquisition, fought strenuously on the side of the Dutch. The original owners of the country had, however, a natural advantage, and slowly won back their possessions. Pernambuco capitulated at last after two sieges, the sufferings entailed by which were described by its Rabbi in a moving poem. In the capitulation, the Jews were safeguarded, the Portuguese guaranteeing them an amnesty 'in all wherein they could promise it'. Nevertheless, the Jewish community (to the number, it was said, of 5,000 souls) dispersed. Many sought refuge in Surinam. Aboab, accompanied by many more, and bearing with him the records of the community, returned to Amsterdam. A few made their way as far as New Amsterdam (as New York was then called), where they laid the foundations of the world's greatest city of refuge.

JANUARY 27TH

Earthquake at Leghorn, 1742.—A series of premonitory tremors, beginning ten days earlier, had caused the inception by the community of a period of prayer and contrition. For the past week there had been no occurrence, and it was thought that all danger was at an end. On Saturday, January 27th, however, just after the morning service, there was a terrible shock. Walls were thrown down, roofs caved in, and fissures opened in the ground. The whole of the population rushed for refuge outside the city, where they remained until all danger was at an end. To commemorate their escape from this peril, the community established a congregational fast day, which is still observed locally on Shevat 22nd. The Order of Service for this occasion, entitled Shir he Todah, was composed by the famous Rabbinical authority, Malahi Cohen.

JANUARY 28TH

The Jewish Pasil occasions in Rome, 1668.—It was the custom hitherto for the carnival season to be celebrated by a series of races, one on each day. These are well known, as elsewhere in Italy, as the Palio, from the piece of cloth which served as the prize. The first and most diverting of these was that in which the Jews had to take part. Before running they were forced to partake of a heavy meal, so as to render the spectacle more diverting; then, stripped naked, they had to run the course from the Jews' quarter along the Corso. At the slightest pretext, the race was declared null, and had to be repeated on another day. Under these circumstances, it ought to be wondered if sometimes the buffooneries played fast and for one of the competitors. The first mention to be found of these curious religious rites dates from the middle of the fifteenth century. It was carried through at the height of the Renaissance period, when Rome was the centre of the artistic and cultural life of Europe. It was abolished by Clement IX on January 28th, 1668, in return for a yearly payment of the sum of two hundred ducats. This continued to be paid until as late as [illegible]

JANUARY 29TH

Death of Abraham Furtado, 1816.—His parents were Portuguese Marranos, and his father had been killed during the terrible Lisbon earthquake of 1755. His mother, who was in danger of the same fate, vowed that if she were delivered, she would return to the God of her fathers. In consequence, she removed to London, where her son Abraham was born. Later, the family removed to Bayonne, and then to Bordeaux. When in 1789 Malesherbes convened a commission of Jews to consider proposals for the amelioration of their condition, Abraham Furtado was one of the two representatives from the south. During the Revolution, he became identified with the Girondists, and was in danger of his life during the Terror. He became prominent again in Jewish affairs in 1806, when he was elected President of the Assembly of Notables; and he played an important part in the subsequent Sanhedrin. On the overthrow of Napoleon, he joined the Royalist party, and held the position of treasurer of the city of Bordeaux at the time of his sudden death in 1816.

JANUARY 30TH

The Gesellschaft der Freunde established in Berlin, 1792.—This was the counterblast of the modernists against the growing intolerance of the orthodox school—'the highthinking and liberal against orthodoxy and immorality', as they themselves expressed it. Its objects were essentially philanthropic and cultural; and it enjoyed the enthusiastic support of Moses Mendelssohn's son Joseph. Its foundation marks a stage in the spread of secularism among the Jews rather than in the history of the Reform movement.

JANUARY 31TH

Regulations for the Jews of England, 1253.—Henry III's perennial neediness and his religious bigotry combined to make him the greatest anti-Semite that ever sat on the throne of England. His 'Mandate to the Justices assigned to the Custody of the Jews' of January 31st, 1253, exemplifies this to a marked degree. The first clause is typical of the whole: 'That no Jew remain in England unless he do the King service: and that from the hour of birth every Jew, whether male or female, serve Us in some way.' Further clauses prohibit the building of new synagogues; enjoin prayer in a subdued voice in those already in existence, so that Christian ears should not be contaminated; forbid the Jews to have in their employment Christian nurses or servants, to eat meat during Lent, or to enter any church; and prescribe the wearing of the Badge of Shame. The last and most important of all forbade the Jews to settle in any towns in which communities were not already to be found. The Jews of England lived under this regime until their expulsion forty-seven years later.

FEBRUARY 1ST

Massacre at Neuss, 1197.—The community of this city (in what is now Rhenish Prussia) was peculiarly distinguished for the series of persecutions which it underwent—unusual even for mediaeval Germany. On January 28th, 1197, a Jew went mad and killed a Christian girl in the public thoroughfare. In an age when purely suppositious murders were responsible for countless martyrdoms, the results of such an action can be imagined. The madman and six other Jews (including the Tosaphist, Samuel ben Natronai) were killed by being broken on the wheel. This, however, did not appease the popular fury. Five days later, the mother of the culprit and her brother were seized, the former being buried alive, and the latter tortured to death. Another woman and her three daughters were carried off to the church and baptized by force: though they afterwards returned to the faith of their fathers. The community subsequently obtained permission to bury the victims, in return for a large monetary payment.

At the Sunday services at 11 a.m. the Rabbi will speak on "Has the State the Right to Take Human Life?" This lecture has been suggested by the campaign to abolish the death penalty which has been inaugurated in England by some leading British officials, by chapters in the latest book of Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing, and by some reference to an execution made by the author, Jim Tully in a recent book.

Rabbi Isserman addressed the Simcoe Street United Church at Oshawa last Sunday evening on "The Church and the Synagogue." This Sunday he will speak at St. Davids United Church, St. Clair and Harvie Avenues. We've changed our phone number and are now on the Lloydbrook exchange, which is fair enough, except for one thing—people desirous of swapping the worry and drudgery of washday at home, for the low-priced bliss and contentment of having this modern laundry do the job much better are phoning a Lombard number very much to the justifiable annoyance of a private citizen. So we would emphasize the necessity of dialing LL on your phone—not LO—and if you are not already one of our contented customers, try the doubleell on your dial now and we will tell you all about our wonderful way of handling family wash.

Jewish School Pact is Rejected

Members of the Jewish Separate Schools Committee, who hold that separate schools for Jews constitute the only solution to the educational mixup in this city, have refused to be bound by the agreement reached on Monday by the Protestant Board of School Commissioners and a group of Jewish citizens whose authority to speak for the Hebrew community is contested.

Direct plea is to be made to the Legislature for separate schools for Jews, it is announced.

Mr. Bercovitch made the following statement: "I wired to the gentlemen who declared they were acting for the Jewish committee yesterday, when in conference with the Protestant Board of School Commissions of Montreal, emphatically protesting and repudiating the settlement I am told they made of the Jewish school question. These gentlemen acted beyond their powers in agreeing to accept anything less than was given the Jews by the judgment of the Privy Council. At two meetings of prominent Jewish citizens residing in both the east and the west-end of Montreal, it was unanimously agreed that nothing less than those rights which the Privy Council declared we possessed would be acceptable as a settlement of the problem. The Privy Council in office declared that the Legislature had the power to amend the act relating to the Council of Public Instruction in a manner that may permit the Jews to be appointed to this body, and any settlement that will not give the Jews this right will never be acceptable to the Jews of the Province."

"Unless under a basis of settlement with the Montreal Protestant School Commission we obtain all the rights given us by the Privy Council for the Jewish people of Montreal, both Mr. Bercovitch and myself will ask for separate schools for Jews in Montreal," said Joseph Cohen, for the St. Lawrence Division of Montreal, when questioned as to the agreement reached in the settlement of the vital educational question in Montreal.

Peter Bercovitch, K.C., for Montreal-St Louis, fully corroborated the above declaration when interviewed.

Under the Privy Council ruling the Quebec Legislature is empowered by new legislation, to grant Montreal Jewry representation on the Protestant committee of the Council of Public Instruction of the Province of Quebec.

The present session will see a settlement of the affair in some form, although no measure was mentioned in the Speech from the Throne; for the position at present existing in Montreal is such that the Protestant Commissioners must either offer some satisfactory arrangement, or else sever all connection with the Jews.

In the meantime the proposals of A. Z. Cohen, A. Bronfman, J. Ogulnick, D. Kirsch and A. Z Jassby have been submitted for consideration.

Following is a statement issued by the Jewish Separate Schools Committee, over the signature of H. Calserman, the chairman:

"A conference of the Jewish Separate Schools Committee was held on Wednesday evening, Jan. 16, to consider the report that appeared in the local newspapers that a committee of Jewish citizens entered into an agreement with a committee of the Protestant School Board for the solution of the Jewish school question.

"It was generally felt that the gentlemen constituting this so-called meeting had no mandate from the Jewish community to make any binding agreement. Not one of the gentlemen named is a member of either the Uptown School Committee or the Separate School Committee which hitherto constituted the bodies representative of the conflicting opinion of the Jewish citizens of this community. It has not been reported how this new committee came into being and whom it is supposed to represent. Certainly the presumption of this new committee to speak in the name of the entire Jewish community is unwarranted and puerile.

"It was the consensus of opinion of those present at the meeting that, in view of the judgment of the Privy Council, no solution of the Jewish school question is possible without the establishment of separate schools. Though the gentlemen constituting the newest committee did not deem it necessary to publish the terms of the agreement, it can safely be surmised that it provides for nothing of a fundamental nature. Any concession of a fundamental nature would be ultra vires of the Legislature.

"It was unanimouslsy resolved that the Separate Schools Committee immediately make known its refusal to be bound by any agreement arrived at between the new committee and the Protestant School Committee. It was further decided that the Separate School Committee continue to urge before the provincial authorities its unalterable view that the solution of the school problem lies in the establishment of separate Jewish schools."

The members of the Montreal Separate Jewish School committee have requested Premier Taschereau to give them an appointment in order that they may set their claims before him and the members of the Provincial Government.

The Jewish community of Montreal is divided into two factions, so far as separate schools are concerned. One organization of citizens is known as the Montreal Separate Jewish School Committee. It will be recalled that the recent decision of the Privy Council held that under section 94 of the British North America Act, the Jewish people of this province had a right to establish separate schools, and also the right to send their children to the common schools, whether Protestant or Catholic.

In Outremont the Protestant schools are not common, they are "dissentient." The Jews have no right to send their children to them, and the Outremont school authorities have notified the Jewish parents that next year they will not be able to accommodate their children owing to the seating capacity being required for Protestant children.

The history of Jewish children attending the Protestant schools of Montreal dates back to 1903, when an agreement was entered into between the parties. Approximately 42 per cent of the pupils in the Protestant schools at present are Jews. The taxes on their parents' property is paid to the Protestant panel. The Privy Council has held that the Jews have no right to be represented upon the Protestant School Board, and no right as to the appointment of teachers.

It is common knowledge that the school taxes are paid into three panels in this city. First there is the Catholic, second the Protestant, and into the neutral panel goes all school taxes on the property of limited companies. This latter is distributed between the Protestant and Catholic school boards according to the percentage of the population. The Jewish share goes to the Protestant panel. P-opécb hetk 0 hrdlu cmwyfp shrdlu

During the past week a committee of Jewish citizens—none of whom belonged to the Jewish Separate Schools Committee or the Uptown School Committee—met the Provincial Secretary, Hon Athanase David, and the Protestant School Board, and later announced that they had reached an agreement with the Protestant authorities, but could not divulge its terms.

The Jewish Separate Schools Committee immediately held a meeting and passed a resolution declaring that the members refused to be bound by any agreement arrived at between the new committee and the Protestant School Board.

Those Jews who are opposed to separate schools take their stand because they object to segregation of their children.

H. M. Calserman, chairman of the Separate School Committee said when interviewed by the Star representative yesterday: "Our children are practically segregated now on account of the area in which they live. Over 75 per cent of the Jewish children of school age in the city of Montreal live in the district bounded by St. Catherine street, St. Denis, Mount Royal ave., and Bleury street. Approximately 95 per cent of the children in the Baron Byng High School are Jews.

"Some of the Protestant school have enforced class room segregation. If sufficient numbers of Jewish children are on the roll they are put in classes by themselves. We Jewish parents are grateful for the education which the Protestant School Board has provided, but many of us believe that there should be no taxation without representation. The Privy Council has held that we are not entitled to representation on the Protestant School Board, and that we have a right to separate schools. These schools are the only solution of our problem.

"Since the educational system of this province is denominational, there is no reason why another panel should not be established, and thus permit the Jewish citizens to have their own system of schools supported out of their own tax money," Mr. Calserman concluded.

It is estimated that $800,000 per annum would meet the needs of a Jewish separate school system in the city at the present time.

Creation of a Jewish committee of seven to act in an advisory capacity to the Montreal Protestant Board of School Commissioners and to bring to the notice of the board grievances or suggestions affecting Hebrew teachers and students, is understood to be one of the main points of the agreement reached Monday, Jan. 14, by members of the Protestant Board and Jewish citizens in conference on settlement of what is known as the Jewish school question.

Official announcement on the agreement is still lacking. It is learned, however, that both parties to the conference agreed to the formation of such an advisory committee, to be named by the Government, should such powers be held to exist. The Jewish committee, of course, would have no legislative powers in Montreal Protestant school matters, but the feeling of the conference apparently was that, since the Protestant Board shows every disposition to settle the Jewish issue on the most generous terms, collaboration by a Jewish committee would abolish the objections which, in great measure, have been the foundation of the long-standing differences.

Such a move, too, was preferred by both sides to any proposal for separate Jewish schools: the Protestants saw objections to that from several viewpoints, while the Jewish delegation was anxious to shun anything in the nature of segregation for Jews.

A point discussed in local Jewish circles was the extent to which the agreement announced Monday will be accepted here as reflecting the views of Montreal Jewry. Evidently those in conference foresaw some contestation in this connection, since they referred to the fact that their proposals could not prevent individuals from taking any other action they saw fit on their own responsibility. That reference is thought to apply to the considerable section of the Jewish community, who believe that separate Jewish schools, with a separate Jew-

The Public Is Welcome

Editorial

Yet we have the spectacle of the leaders of Zionism driven frantic in their endeavors to keep the body of Zionism alive in the freezing atmosphere of indifference which surrounds them. Zionism has not entered the blood of the masses. It does not determine attitudes. It is not an instinct. The existence of the masses drags on as if Zionism had no relation to Jewish fundamentals.

The situation is there: leaders without followers; activities that appear to have no organic relation to the body of existence; movements that move in the air and out in the depth of mass life; flashes and disturbances among the dwellers of the tower; silence and apathy among the swarms on earth.

Why this lack of correspondence between the activity of the leaders and the apparent unresponsiveness of the masses? Is it that the leaders are not the right sort, do not understand the life of the masses and are not capable of setting in motion the energy which is stored up in it? Is it that the turmoil of activities in the Jewish communal market is out of harmony with the forces that move under the surfaces of life? Or is it that the mass of the public is so sluggish and insipid that it cannot inspire any leadership; that it has no characteristic ideas, or significant tendencies requiring expression in folk enterprises? A.B.B.

ish school board, constitutes the best solution to the educational question, and some views along those lines will yet be voiced, it is anticipated

One other matter apparently will be heard of at Quebec. Peter Bercovitch, K.C., for St. Louis, who was among those conducting original negotiations between Jews and the Protestant Board, is understood to have in mind the proposal that two Jews be appointed to the Protestant Committee of Public Instruction, which now has seventeen members.

That question, it is understood, was broached here during the negotiations. Wide differences of opinion are said to have existed on the point, and it is said that neither the Protestant Board nor the Jewish committee which sat in conference with the Protestant Board will appear in the matter. It seems that Mr. Bercovitch will bring up the question of his own accord.
